RAIDER'S ESCAPE MARVELOUS

Chased by British Warships from Midnight Saturday But Manages to Outdistance All of Her Pursuers and Reach Safety of the Virginia Capes.

By Associated Press.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., April 12.—How the German merchant raider Kronprinz Wilhelm which came into this port Sunday morning was chased by British warships after midnight Saturday and barely escaped capture was described by officers of the British merchant vessel destroyed in the South Atlantic by the Wilhelm.

Shortly before noon today the 61 British officers and men of the steamers Tamar and Colby were taken from the Wilhelm aboard a tug and cruised down the river to the British horseship Cassandra which will sail late today for Glasgow. The harbor was lined with British merchant ships as the captives of the German raider were released and as their tug steamed by hundreds of British sailors lined the decks of their ships and cheered.

When the liberated British tars reached the Cassandra's deck they tossed the remnants of their baggage aboard and danced around in anticipation of the trip to their native land, joyous that they had escaped death by the guns of their own country's warships.

Did we see British warships Saturday night? said W. J. Gow, chief engineer of the steamer Colby sunk in the South Atlantic March 27. We certainly did. [illegible] one and heard others. I saw one about midnight off on the horizon and she was chasing us from midnight until we reached safety in the Virginia capes about 3 o'clock Sunday morning. Of course we were all put below every night at 9 o'clock but I could see the dark dim outlines of the warship. The Wilhelm seemed to be the faster ship for as time went on the lines of the warship grew dimmer and dimmer until she disappeared in the distance. Our escape to the port was marvelous. We were running with all lights out and at top speed from 3 o'clock Saturday, when we headed directly west.

TWO BUILDINGS BURNED

Double Houses at Wheeler are Destroyed by Fire.

Fire of an unknown origin destroyed two unoccupied double houses at Wheeler early Sunday morning. Two other houses on either side of the burned dwellings were saved, one by a bucket and garden hose brigade and the other by the chemicals of the Connellsville automobile truck.

The fire was discovered about 6:30 o'clock. It was then burning fiercely inside one of the houses. In a short time this was destroyed and the adjoining dwelling ignited. A bucket brigade was formed but nothing could be done to save the two buildings. Garden hose was used to play a stream on the roof of the third house occupied by a Slavish family and this was saved.

The Connellsville department was called by telephone. Chemical extinguishers were used to extinguish the blaze at a fourth house.

The burned houses were the property of the Wheeler Improvement Company in which Mayor Rockwell Marietta, A. D. Soisson and William Dull are interested. The loss is about $2,000.

The fire department was called out Sunday evening about 10 o'clock to extinguish a small fire in a shed between Second and Third streets, West Side. Some rubbish inside the building had caught fire. No damage was done.

BABY BULGAR BORN ON B. & O. TRAIN NAMED "JIM REED"

Proud Parents Pay a Tribute to Conductor of No. 5.

THE STORK STALKS AT WILLIAMS

Smoking Car Becomes Temporary Hospital When Mere Males Are Shooed Out in Order That New Immigrant May Arrive Safely.

When Captain James B. Reed, conductor on Baltimore & Ohio train No. 5, reached Connellsville on Saturday night he reported a most unusual occurrence to Superintendent O. L. Eaton. Something that had never happened on any of his trains during his railroad career had taken place as the train passed Williams Station just across the Maryland line—Mrs. Frank Mitchell, a Gypsy woman, gave birth to a lusty son, who was named James Reed Mitchell in honor of the conductor.

Mrs. Mitchell was a member of a party of 14 Bulgarians dressed in the gay colors of the Gypsy tribes who roam throughout the country in the summer. There were six men, seven children and three women seated in the forward end of the men's smoking car. Captain Reed [illegible] marked to his brakeman [illegible] that there seemed to be a suppressed apprehension among the Gypsy women. As the train reached Williams the reason was divulged. The forward end of a Baltimore & Ohio smoking car passing from Maryland into Pennsylvania was the birthplace of a new life.

Men in the smoking car were driven to the rear of the day coach behind while a cot was improvised for Mrs. Mitchell between the seats. A telegram was sent ahead to Meyersdale and at that point Dr. Eighty, the company physician, boarded the train. By that time however mother and son were doing well.

The event was one of great importance and it soon spread throughout the train. Everybody was excited about it except the father who owned four of the seven children in the party and wasn't particularly perturbed over the arrival of a fifth even at such an inopportune time and place.

When the news spread among the Pullman passengers F. C. Hird and D. F. Connell surrendered their stateroom to the mother and son.

It is said that the Gypsies own a wheat farm of 480 acres near Calgary, Alberta and are on their way there.

FIREMEN DISAPPOINTED

Say Pension Bill Will Eliminate Most of Men of State.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., April 12.—Firemen here who have worked hard to have the civil service bill for firemen and police of third class cities presented to this State Legislature fear that they have been given a black eye and left out in the cold by an amendment that was made to the bill before it passed the House. When copies of the bill reached this city it was found that the amendment practically eliminated most of the firemen of the third class cities.

An amendment provides that as third-class city that does not have a full paid fire department shall benefit by the civil service plan. New Castle has as many volunteer fire companies as there are paid companies. This amendment firemen here fear would prohibit New Castle firemen from coming under the bill's protective provisions even if the law passes.

THUNDERSTORM BREAKS THE DROUTH; MERCURY TUMBLES

Downpour Soaks the Ground but Old Sol Has Since Been Coy, High Wind Blows.

The long drouth was broken over Sunday. A light drizzle on Saturday was followed by showers yesterday morning and a downpour in the afternoon. There was a real thunderstorm yesterday afternoon accompanied by a high wind.

The rain was welcome. Even those who were caught out in it were willing to be inconvenienced for the satisfaction of having the dust eliminated if for no other reason. Farmers and gardeners were delighted. It was a hard rain and there is promise of more and it has been a long time since the moisture was so badly needed in the spring.

There was a high wind yesterday afternoon. For a time it attained the proportions of a miniature gale. The thunder and lightning was not so severe but it furnished the proper setting for the rain. For nearly an hour the downpour continued without cessation. The streets were flooded in spots. For a time it was virtually impossible to cross Main street afoot.

The mercury tumbled several degrees and the almost sultry weather of the latter part of last week has been replaced by air that is chill and penetrating. Old Sol hasn't shown a disposition to stay on the job since the rain.

The Pittsburg district was particularly hard hit by yesterday's storm. Considerable damage was done there. Telephone service was interrupted for a time, a number of wires being down in the neighborhood of Youngwood, no less than 17 telephone and telegraph poles were blown over, causing interruption to communication.

MAKES A RECORD

B. & O. Southwestern Accommodation Runs 411 Days on Time.

Passenger train No. 27 between Cincinnati, North Vernon and Seymour, Ind., on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern railroad established a record for punctuality of having been on time at its destination from February 15, 1914 to March 31, 1915. In this period of 411 days the train was operated approximately 360,000 miles and being an accommodation made twenty-seven intermediate stops between terminals and made a schedule of 27.2 miles an hour including stops on the 87 mile run. The train was required to meet several other passenger trains on the schedule as well as the regular freight traffic on the division.

Officials of the road believe that it is the longest unbroken record for punctuality ever made by an accommodation train on a long run over the main line of a trunk line railroad.

NOTIFIES DEALERS

Health Officer Warns Them That Foodstuffs Must be Covered.

Health Officer George Hetzel today began notifying dealers in meats, fish, fruits and vegetables that the provision of the health ordinance requiring all exposed goods to be covered will be rigidly enforced. Some dealers are ignoring this provision entirely.

Section 27 of the health ordinance provides that all fruits, vegetables, fish and meat displayed outside of the stores or on wagons must be thoroughly protected from flies. Stands on which such goods are displayed must be at least two and a half feet from the pavement or floor.

The board of health will shortly inaugurate a clean-up campaign in which the residents will be required to do the cleaning.

URGES PROTECTION

Secretary Lane Wants to See Dyestuffs Manufactured in U. S.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The new federal trade commission might protect Americans who begin the manufacture of dyestuffs in the opinion of Secretary Lane who called at the White House.

If after the war any foreign concerns should start cutting rates to drive American plants out of business I see no reason why the trade commission should not step in, he said.

It seems to me that Americans should go ahead and try to manufacture the needed dyestuffs to meet the demand of the textile manufacturers.

GOUGED WITH FORK IN FIGHT, TROTTER MAN WILL LOSE EYE

Two Arrests Made in Connection With Row at Coke Town.

VICTIM IS PAINFULLY HURT

Four Men Are Said to Have Attacked Him and County Detective is at Work. Officers Seeking Two Who Are Believed to Have Been Involved.

Two men have been arrested and officers are seeking for two others who are accused of stabbing Charles Barner, a foreign coke worker at Trotter Saturday night. Barner's assailants are alleged to have used a fork and hacked his face with it, almost gouging his right eye out.

Barner was brought to the office of Dr. J. L. Junk about 1:30 o'clock Sunday morning, suffering from painful injuries of the face, head and shoulders. His right eye was severely injured and a further examination showed that he would lose the sight of it permanently.

Details of the stabbing are meagre. It is said that four men came to Barner's house No. 40 while he was in bed asleep. One of them it is alleged secured a fork and used it to inflict deep gashes on the prostrate man's face.

Constables William Ireland and J. J. Rottler went to Trotter and arrested two men this morning. Informations will be made against them before Alderman Fred Munk. County Detective John Smith who was notified of the affray made arrangements to come down at once and make an investigation.

It is said that Barner's injuries are severe, but will not prove fatal.

BOOSTS EXPORT TRADE

B. & O. Sends Valuable Booklet to Coal Shippers of System.

With a view to encouraging the exportation of coal from the United States and pointing out the opportunities for extending this trade as a result of the European War, an article summarizing the world's coal industry and issued by the National City Bank of New York is being distributed by the Baltimore & Ohio railroad to producers whose mines are reached by the lines of this company. The pamphlet is replete with the latest available statistics of production and consumption, exportation and importation of coal by the principal countries of the world and in the form in which it is prepared it comprises a valuable handbook of the coal trade for ready reference.

The pamphlet shows in striking way the tremendous proportions of the coal industry as well as the destruction of commerce and financial loss which the countries at war have suffered through the interruption of their coal trade which temporarily at least has withdrawn a vast tonnage from commerce.

PLAN NEW TRAIN

Baltimore & Ohio May Add Another Accommodation to Uniontown.

Though no authoritative information has been received at division offices here it is understood in Baltimore & Ohio official circles here upon the when the schedule is revised that it will include a new train arriving here from Pittsburg at 12:30 P. M. and continuing to Uniontown. Arriving there at 1:10 it would probably make the return to Pittsburg, leaving there at 1:20 P. M.

This train would probably replace No. 50 which now arrives from Pittsburg at 6:30 P. M. Officials claim that the change has been discussed and the new schedule which will be effective on May 3 are expected to include it.

At the present time there is no train from Pittsburg between 9:1[illegible] A. M. and 3 P. M. and no train to Pittsburg between [illegible] A. M. and [illegible] P. M.

The talk of new trains does not include a noon train to Pittsburg, something which local patrons of the Baltimore & Ohio have been urging for many years.

Sports

Connellsville is to see some fine boxing shows within the next few months if Promoter Jack Stevens can land bouts for all of the men who want to be matched up. Much interest centers in the Fay Kaiser-Tommy Jones scrap before the local club Friday night, but on the 27th light fans will see Patsy Brannigan pitted against Jim McCoy of Fon du Lac, Wis.

Stevens went to Cleveland this morning to look up some talent for a show at Frostburg, Md., Thursday night. Fay Kaiser may be matched against some fast middleweight for that night.

The preliminaries at the show Friday night should prove more than usually interesting. Bill Carter, the husky colored boy, is to meet Battling Ward. Carter pleased the fans at the last show by the way he went after his man, and as Ward is the same style of boxer, a good bout is bound to ensue.

F. Duncan will meet Joe Beal of Uniontown, and here too, excitement is expected.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Woman Suffrage will be a non-partisan issue in Pennsylvania this fall. The voters will be called upon to pass upon an amendment to the constitution extending the right of suffrage to women. The question is open to debate in the public arena, and advocates of the measure are already actively at work. These embrace some women of high character and undoubted mental attainments, fitting and worthy examples for illustration the claim that some women are more intelligent and more lady-like than some men.

The Pennsylvania voter who desires to pass upon this question intelligently, and we may add patriotically, should consider primarily whether suffrage will be made better or worse by the extension of the franchise to women; that is to say, whether the average of honesty and intelligence will be raised or lowered.

Women as a whole are more conscientious and self-respecting than men. Assuming that they all voted they would undoubtedly raise the moral standard of the electorate, but would they raise the average of intelligent voting? The male voter may be ever so honest and well meaning, but when he lacks intelligence he is a dangerous element. We have had some recent example of the disastrous consequences of his running amuck. A woman would be just the same only worse.

Women are notoriously indifferent to public and poorly informed concerning them, but if they had the right to vote they might possibly take more interest in public questions and inform themselves better. This we take it, would be altogether a matter of fashion. If suffrage is the mode perhaps it will be as popular as bridge or tango or the latest creation of the modiste. But feminine fashions change frequently and with great suddenness, and possibly when voting is no longer in style there will be no women at the polls but those of strong minds and weak morals in which event suffrage will not have been improved.

"Taxation without representation" seems to be the slogan of the Women Suffragists, but their case is hardly parallel with that of the Patriots of 1776. The Colonies had no representation in Parliament whatever; the women of Pennsylvania are represented in all legislative and governing bodies even if the representatives are men. Taxation and representation are not wholly synonymous terms even under our system of representative government. Citizens who pay the largest share of school tax very frequently have no children to educate. They too might complain of taxation without representation. On the other hand a large proportion of the voters of the state have representation without taxation; the taxes assessed against them being nominal and collected only by various organizations. It has in fact been seriously proposed to abolish the poll tax altogether. Taxes, it may be observed in conclusion, are paid not for representation but for protection in person and property.

The Anti-Suffragists are women who shrink from coming in contact with the rudest political elements and call blessed husband and father and brothers have created prejudice against their coming in contact with such influences. Progressives there are to work vote and many of them will be so ... in this campaign. It remains to be seen how many there will be and how impressive their campaign arguments.

AFTER THE WAR, WHAT?

The balance of trade continues to be largely in our favor, and as recently noted in these columns it does not mean that our exports are greater than ever; on the contrary, they are less, but imports have shrunken still more. Henry Clews the New York banker gives some interesting figures on this point in his weekly letter. He says:

"Our own foreign trade has been more seriously disturbed by the war than is generally supposed. Imports are running steadily behind, thus swelling the excess of exports. The latter would also have shrunken considerably had it not been for the large shipments of food products, war materials and the partial recovery of cotton shipments. During the seven months ending January 31st, these remarkable decreases occurred in our exports: Cotton, $275,000,000; machinery $61,000,000; steel products $50,000,000; copper and manufactures thereof, $47,000,000; lumber and manufactures thereof, $32,000,000; mineral oils $11,000,000; engines and cars, $11,000,000; tobacco, $10,000,000; naval stores $7,000,000; electrical machinery $5,000,000, and cotton goods, $4,000,000. These losses were almost entirely due to the war. They were partly offset during the same period by increases of $190,000,000 in breadstuffs, $51,000,000 in horses and mules, $12,000,000 in leather, $10,000,000 in wool manufactures, and large shipments of war materials. A further idea of the effect of the war upon our foreign trade is illustrated by decreases of $21,000,000 in our exports to Germany, $2,000,909 to Belgium, $10,000,000 to Russia, $11,000,000 to Austria-Hungary and $18,000,000 to Canada, while our exports to Great Britain increased $15,000,000, to Italy $10,000,000, and to France $17,000,000. At the moment export demands for grain and cotton appear to have reached their peak and are temporarily at least on the wane. This of course would tend to keep down the big foreign credit balance and give rise to more normal conditions in foreign exchange. At the same time the latest reports from Washington show that during the week ending April 3 our exports were $65,000,000 while the imports decreased $...000,000, leaving a trade balance for the week alone of over $21,000,000. It is known that contracts have been placed in this country for further munitions of large volume for export, which at a fair valuation would approximate about $30,000,000. Heavy shipments in war materials are forthcoming, and these figures will have to enter into the international trade account. Another important item which will have to be considered is the annual remittances for tourists, usually estimated at about $200,000,000. This sum will not be spent abroad this year, but will remain at home much of it to be distributed among American railroads, hotels and summer resorts."

The balance of trade in favor of this country, however, undoubtedly saved it from untold embarrassment in connection with the redemption of its securities held abroad. It was the threat of these securities which closed the stock exchanges and did more than anything else to darken the financial horizon after the outbreak of the European war.

With rumor of possible peace, comes the recurring question, After the war what?

It is difficult to predict with certainty what the conditions will be after the war is over. Financiers and statesmen seem to be in doubt on this point but there is no reason to borrow trouble on account of the resulting conditions. There will have to be a period of reconstruction and readjustment but unless all precedents fail it is quite possible that the war-worn nations will show greater recuperative power than at present anticipated.

With peace should come more confidence in domestic trade, and this should more than make up for any possible losses in our foreign business if there should be any, which is improbable. Our foreign business should be better instead of worse and we will be ready to buy more goods abroad than we are taking now. With free trading there will be more trade.

IGNORANCE OR WORSE.

Hark the following plaint from the ill-mannered and ill-informed Uniontown New Freedom Standard:

"Since the Baker ballot was adopted in Pennsylvania over a score of years ago it has been the law of the state that the party polling the highest vote at the last previous Presidential election should head the ballot. The Democratic party by reason of the vote of 1912 occupies that place now. But Jim McNichol and Senator W. E. Crow want the figures of the last state election to govern, which would rob the Democrats of their rights and give them to the Kang, too but McNichol and Crow are good sports."

Whether the law is changed or not, the Democratic position on the ballot will remain the same. The Progressives polled the highest vote at the Presidential election of 1912 in Pennsylvania, the Democrats being second. In the election for Governor in 1914, the Republicans polled the largest number of votes, the Democrats coming in second.

"Robbing the Democrats of their rights" hey? Why, they have no right to anything but second place at any time or under any circumstances. In Pennsylvania they come second on the face of the returns. In the nation they had a plurality in 1912 but they were still a minority party by over ... million votes.

After 1916, however, there will be no doubt of the Democratic place.

The Uniontown New Freedom Standard is becoming a monomaniac on the subject of robbery. It charges that its lodge has been stolen and that Crow and Jim McNichols are conspiring to rob the Democratic party of its rightful place on the ballot. Next thing it will be declaring that somebody has stolen its reputation for decency and veracity.

DOES THE REST OF THE COUNTRY REALIZE WHAT HAS HAPPENED?

The American Farmer.

By GEORGE FITCH,

Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

The American farmer is a careless, unscientific lazy individual who raises more and bigger crops than the farmer of any other country.

We get the description of the American farmer from his European critics and his own as it were the greatest authority of the world. It is very perfect that so thriftless a man should be able to feed not only himself but a dozen foreign nations into the bargain. Perhaps if he worked harder all Europe would be enabled to abandon its farms and live entirely on war and glory.

Foreign critics tell us that if the American farmer worked as hard and as carefully as the European farmer he would raise twice as much wheat per acre. But when reproached with this the American farmer smiles a shy sweet smile and asks that his European competitor ... ever had carefully for automobiles and other signs of prosperity. After a European farmer has lavished his unflagging attention for eighteen hours a day upon his wheat field, raising tremendous crops there on for twenty-five years, he borrows enough money to pay his fare to America where one falls morning in a cultivator seat and drives into town in his bottom ... hours in the afternoon to see the ball game.

And at the end of five years the government comes down on him with great zeal and reproaches him for holding out on his income tax report.

There is some mystery in this. Why does the old world farmer work himself into an early and frugal tomb while the American farmer loafs himself into the presidency of the village bank? Is this a proper reward for industry?

Industry unmixed with intelligence of any sort.

In answer we might observe that it is the usual reward for industry unmixed with intelligence of any sort.

The American farmer could sequester himself on a ten acre lot and toil as hard as any one raising wheat with a hoe and cutting it with a sickle. If he was that foolish. Instead he prefers to joy-ride over a 320 acre farm on a flock of red white and green machinery, raising half as much wheat per acre and ten times as much financial comfort per year.

If ten careworn European scientists would combine, but one American corn planter and tear down the gothic stone walls between their rug sized farms one of them could do the work while the other nine went fishing.

Any farmer could raise 70 bushels of wheat on an acre of ground in America if he wasn't so busy raising 30 bushels of corn per acre on a quarter section.

How About a New Pair Shoes?

The spring season is now on and that means a new pair of spring shoes for almost everybody, except the barefooted boys and girls, and even they must have a pair for Sunday. The Union Supply Company announce complete lines of new styles for spring and summer, for men, women, misses, boys and girls. It would take a whole lot of space to specify fully all our lines, or all our different prices, and we will not attempt to do it. We merely want you to know that it will be to your interest to visit a Union Supply Company store if you are obliged to purchase shoes. Our styles are one great attraction; good wearing qualities another inducement; and our fair prices is another big inducement. Then our guarantee on every pair makes you perfectly safe. If the goods are not as represented and do not give you the wear we claim, we guarantee they will be replaced or your money refunded.

BISHOP HUGHES WILL BE GIVEN A RECEPTION

Methodists From Scottdale and Surrounding Towns Will Meet Him

IN THE SCOTTDALE CHURCH

He Comes as the Closing Lecturer of the Young Men's Christian Association Course and Will Also Visit Congregation of His Denomination.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTTDALE, April 12.—Methodist Episcopal people of Connellsville, Mount Pleasant, Dunbar and surrounding towns have a special interest in the coming to Scottdale of one of the youngest and most active bishops of their denomination, Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, on Wednesday evening. There has been arranged for him an informal reception at the Methodist Church at 8:30 o'clock that evening, a committee consisting of the pastor, Rev. R. S. Piper, Dr. L. T. Gilbert, president of the board of trustees, Jud T. Strickler, president of the Organized Men's Bible Class, and Theodore Hockey, recording steward, having the details in charge. It is expected that there will be a large crowd of the Methodists and their friends from town and vicinity present. There will be no collection, no freshments, and Bishop Hughes will give a short informal address. At 8:30 that evening he closes this year's Y. M. C. A. lecture course at no refreshments, and Bishop Hughes has the reputation of being fully up to the standard set his high ecclesiastical office, and a brilliant and forceful speaker.

RECORD BROKEN.

There was absent from the Men's Bible Class of the Methodist Church on Sunday one of the members who has a record for attendance, Samuel J. Zearley, the architect, who was taken ill the Sunday previous with apparently a cerebral hemorrhage. Mr. Zearley, it is said, in six years of membership in the class missed but eight Sundays and those when he was away from town or it was otherwise absolutely impossible that he could be present. Frederick Johnston of Morgan Station is another man with a record for constant attendance having missed no Sundays except those when he was away from town. There are several others in the class also who have good records for attendance.

AT WEST NEWTON.

Carl H. Collier, W. L. Schaffer, W. W. Hines and Denny Dale were at West Newton Saturday night, installing the officers in the lodge of Odd Fellows at that place.

SIGNS OF SPRING

Sunday proved one of the most spring-like days of the year, and the rain that fell much cheer, drought having made everything bleak and green. The field and lawn look very dull this spring and almost as if burned out, but the rain freshened them up in a marked way and the green cast given them was most encouraging. In the afternoon there was a thunderstorm with the shower and a heavy windstorm, too, about 4 o'clock. On Saturday there was also a heavy wind about the same hour, that brought branches from the trees, blew down old fences and carried on quite a good deal for about 15 minutes. Buds are beginning to show plainly on the trees and leaves are beginning to poke timorously out. The pessimist say, "Oh, well, it's going to get nice then a heavy frost will come." Perhaps so. A good many farmers have their oats sowed and the ground is in fine condition. Some few have planted early potatoes. But there are no seed potatoes in town at all of the early varieties. Does no one love a spud?

AN ENGAGEMENT.

At a tea given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. J. H. Marvin the engagement of her sister, Miss Irene Bowers to Paul R. Hammer of Greensburg was announced. Covers were laid for 20. Guests were present from Greensburg, Jeannette, Mount Pleasant and Scottdale.

JURORS DRAWN.

A number of citizens of Scottdale borough and East Huntingdon township have been drawn as jurors for the May term of court at Greensburg. For petit jury, Monday, May 10, John Gaul, S. P. Lowrie, Harry Newcomer and Walter T. Stoner of Scottdale, and John E. Myers and Jacob Reif of East Huntingdon township. Monday, May 17, Charles A. Brown, James Gallagher and M. M. Trout of Scottdale, and Austin Cramer, Hamilton Cunningham, Edward Long, John Storey and George A. Tressler of East Huntingdon township. Monday, May 24, Arthur E. Collins, Walter Harris, E. R. EVEN CROSS, SICK CHILDREN LOVE SYRUP OF FIGS

If Feverish, Bilious Constipated, Give Fruit Laxative at Once.

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. "Laxative" and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mothers! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.—Adv.

THE SOISSON.

"THE BLACK BOX" TODAY.

The first episode of the new serial "The Black Box" will be presented at the Soisson Theatre today. It is a most thrilling play and should be a record breaker. No. ... is a two reel Biograph drama with Murdock McQuarrie and Agnes Vernon in the cast. It is an exciting play full of startling scenes. "Six Months to Live" is a splendid Fox comedy drama that will please. The sterling five reel drama "Olive's Love" is a coming play tomorrow, the sensational five reel French drama "Charlotte Corday" with Constance Crowley and Arthur Maude in the cast.

"THE HAM TREE."

McIntyre & Heath, the only living genuine delineators of the old ... of negro who flourished in the South in the days before the war, are the stars in John Cort's magnificent revival of George V. Hobart and Jean Schwartz's musical novelty "The Ham Tree," which will be the attraction at the Soisson Theatre Tuesday, April 20. These comedians, who have been before the public for over forty years, present the negro with all his natural comedy. They long ago established their right to be recognized as artists and hold their position as leaders in the field of entertainment. There is no ... for them ... shouting and ... of ... counterfeit of the real negro in their performance. They present an enviable contrast to the garish noisy acts of their contemporaries. It is certainly refreshing to see the two men with a few ... and ... turn ... in the countenance ... the genuine atmosphere of the Southland with the natural touch of the negro, who is very ... of laughter. It is this quality in their performance ... which raises them far above the ordinary and which proves a revelation to those who are unfamiliar with their remarkable success as creators of innocent merriment. They certainly have no equal. Mr. Hobart in writing "The Ham Tree" took the famous old sketch "The Georgia Minstrels," which McIntyre & Heath have been playing for several years, and wrote his play around it. The result is one of the greatest laughmakers the American stage has ever known and from the time of the rise of the curtain till its fall at the end of the performance, the clever artists keep the audience in a continuous roar of laughter. John Cort has given these players a splendid production and has surrounded them with a remarkable company of musical comedy favorites.

THE COLONIAL.

"THE MORALS OF MARCUS."

A Famous Players Paramount feature of extraordinary importance is the five part photo adaptation of "The Morals of Marcus," which provided Marie Doro with her most stellar triumph, and in the screen version of which she surpasses the distinction of her original stage success, exhibited for the first time in Connellsville Tuesday at the Colonial Theatre.

The story, one of the most popular plots of modern literature, concerns the sweetly pathetic heroine of slender build and soulful eyes and her strange experiences in the home of a great, strong man, Sir Marcus, where she spends her time creeping into hearts and nibbling at the serious affairs of life.

From the entertaining story he told in his best novel, "The Morals of Marcus," William J. Locke fashioned a delightful play from which has been evolved one of the most unusual photoplays ever screened.

THE ARCADE.

Possibly the best tabloid show that the management has offered to the public this season was presented the first three days of this week, as those who witnessed the performances of this company will undoubtedly say.

The management in persuance of its course in offering its patrons only the best went out of its way in price to get this company and the audiences, though extremely appreciative, were not as large as was expected to justify fully the management in such a large expenditure. We are sure our patrons appreciate and want a high class show at a very reasonable price but this can only be accomplished to the benefit of all at an increased attendance.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday the attraction at this theatre presents four splendid vaudeville acts that are sure to please. Another added attraction at this theatre are feature pictures every Wednesday and Friday.

THE UNIVERSAL TIPPLE

Little Talks on Health and Hygiene by Samuel G. Dixon, M. D., LL. D., Commissioner of Health.

Coffee and tea are the two beverages used almost universally by the adult population throughout the civilized and semi-civilized world.

It is impossible to say how many tens of millions of dollars are expended upon them annually. Although their use has steadily increased they might be discontinued by the multitudes who have formed the habit without the loss of any benefit and in the majority of cases abstinence would result in distinct physical gain.

Neither coffee nor tea are to be considered foods; both are stimulants and it is this which is responsible for their popularity. As with all other stimulants there is a continual tendency to over indulgence because a moderate allowance after a time fails to give the necessary incitement to the nervous system.

While the mind is often stimulated to good work for a short time by coffee or tea any stimulus which they give is transitory for there is a period of depression following the use of all stimulants. Experiments have shown that over indulgence in both have a tendency in the long run to dull the working of the mind.

A moderate use may not be followed by any noticeable ill effect but nervousness and disturbances of the digestive system are almost certain to follow the excessive use of either. Tea ... an astringent action which ... often harmful.

Any value which might follow from the use of a warm beverage with meals which is the property of the food is below the body temperature ... partially offset by this action. Hot water or the ... which ... water, which ... milk and soup ... of our childhood days is far better.

Many people ... to ... almost entirely ... fail to drink the proper quantity of pure water.

HIS LOVE STORY

CHAPTER XXI.

Master and Friend.

Pitchoune, who might have been considered as one of the infinitesimal atoms in the economy of the universe, ran over the sands away from his master. He was an infinitesimal dot on the desert's face. He was only a small Irish terrier in the heart of the Sahara. His little wiry body and his color seemed to blend with the dust. His eyes were dimmed by hunger and thirst and exhaustion, but there was the blood of a fighter in him and he was a thoroughbred. Nevertheless, he was running away. It looked very much like it. There was no one to comment on his treachery; had there been, Pitchoune would not have run far.

It was not an ordinary sight to see on the Sahara—a small Irish terrier going as fast as he could.

Pitchoune ran with his nose to the ground. There were several trails for a dog to follow on that apparently untrodden page of desert history. Which one would he choose? Without a scent a dog does nothing. His nostrils are his instinct. His devotion, his faithfulness, his intelligence, his heart—all come through his nose. A man's heart, they say, is in his stomach—or in his pocket. A dog's is in his nostrils. If Pitchoune had chosen the wrong direction, this story would never have been written. Michette did not give birth to the sixth puppy, in the stables of the garrison, for nothing. Nor had Sabron saved him on the night of the memorable dinner for nothing.

With his nose flat to the sands Pitchoune smelt to east and to west, to north and south, took a scent to the east, decided on it—for what reason will never be told—and followed it. Fatigue and hunger were forgotten as hour after hour Pitchoune ran across the Sahara. Mercifully, the sun had been clouded by the precursor of a windstorm. The air was almost cool. Mercifully, the wind did not arise until the little terrier had pursued his course to the end.

There are occasions when an animal's intelligence surpasses the human. When, toward evening of the twelve hours that it had taken him to reach a certain point, he came to a settlement of mud huts on the borders of an oasis, he was pretty nearly at the end of his strength. The oasis was the only sign of life in five hundred miles. There was very little left in his small body. He lay down, panting, but his bright spirit was unwilling just then to leave his form and hovered near him. In the religion of Tatman dogs alone have souls.

Pitchoune panted and dragged himself to a pool of water around which the green palms grew, and he drank and drank. Then the little desert wayfarer hid himself in the bushes and slept till morning. All night he was racked with convulsive twitches, but he slept and in his dreams he killed a young chicken and ate it. In the morning he took a bath in the pool and the sun rose while he swam in the water.

If Sabron or Miss Redmond could have seen him he would have seemed the epitome of heartless egoism. He was the epitome of wisdom. Instinct and wisdom sometimes go closely together. Solomon was only instinctive when he asked for wisdom. The epicurean Lucullus, when dying, asked for a certain Nile fish cooked in [illegible]

Pitchoune shook out his short [illegible] body and came out of the [illegible] into the sunlight and trotted into [illegible] Arabian village.

* * * * * *

Fatou Anni parched corn in a brazier before her house. Her house was a mud hut with yellow walls. It [illegible] no roof and was open to the sky. Fatou Anni was ninety years old, [illegible] as a lance—straight as the [illegible] lances the men of the village [illegible] when they went to dispute with white people. These lances with which the young men had fought, had won them the last battle. They had been victorious on the field.

Fatou Anni was the grandmother of many men. She had been the mother of many men. Now she parched corn tranquilly, prayerfully.

"Allah! that the corn should not burn; Allah! that it should be sweet; Allah! that her men should be always successful."

She was the fetish of the settlement. In a single blue garment, her black scrawny breast uncovered, the thin veil that the Fellaheen wear pushed back from her face, her fine eyes were revealed and she might have been a priestess as she bent over her corn!

"Allah! Allah Akbar!"

Rather than anything should happen to Fatou Anni, the settlement would have roasted its enemies alive, torn them in shreds. Some of them said that she was two hundred years old. There was a charmed ring drawn around her house. People supposed that if any creature crossed it uninvited, it would fall dead.

The sun had risen for an hour and the air was still cool. Overhead, the sky, unstained by a single cloud, was blue as a turquoise floor, and against it, black and portentous, flew the vultures. Here and there the sun-touched pools gave life and reason to the oasis.

Fatou Anni parched her corn. Her barbaric chant was interrupted by a sharp bark and a low pleading whine.

She had never heard sounds just like that. The dogs of the village were great wolflike creatures. Pitchoune's bark was angelic compared with theirs. He crossed the charmed circle drawn around her house, and did not fall dead, and stood before her, whining. Fatou Anni left her corn, stood upright and looked at Pitchoune. To her the Irish terrier was an apparition. The fact that he had not fallen dead proved that he was beloved of Allah. He was, perhaps, a genie, an afrit.

Pitchoune fawned at her feet. She murmured a line of the Koran. It did not seem to affect his demonstrative affection. The woman bent down to him after making a pass against the Evil Eye, and touched him, and Pitchoune licked her hand.

Fatou Anni screamed, dropped him, went into the house and made her ablutions. When she came out Pitchoune sat patiently before the parched corn, and he again came crawling to her.

The Arabian woman lived in the last hut of the village. She could satisfy her curiosity without shocking her neighbors. She bent down to scrutinize Pitchoune's collar. There was a sacred medal on it with sacred inscriptions which she could not read. But as soon as she had freed him this time, Pitchoune tore himself away from her, flew out of the sacred ring and disappeared. The he ran back, barking appealingly; he took the hem of her dress in his mouth and pulled her. He repeatedly did this and the superstitious Arabian believed herself to be called divinely. She cautiously left the doorstep, her veil falling before her face, came out of the sacred ring, followed to the edge of the berry field. From there Pitchoune sped over the desert; when he stopped and looked back at her. Fatou Anni did not follow, and he returned to renew his entreaties. When she tried to touch him he escaped, keeping at a safe distance. The village began to stir. Blue and yellow garments fluttered in the streets.

"Allah Akbar," Fatou Anni murmured, "these are days of victory, of recompense."

She gathered her robe around her and, statelily and impressively, started toward the huts of her grandsons. When she returned, eight young warriors, fully armed, accompanied her. Pitchoune sat beside the parched corn, watching the brazier and her meal. Fatou Anni pointed to the desert.

She said to the young men, "Go with this genie. There is something he wishes to show us. Allah is great. Go."

* * * * * * *

When the Capitaine de Sabron opened his eyes in consciousness, they encountered a square of blazing blue heaven. He weakly put up his hand to shade his sight, and a cotton awning, supported by four bamboo poles, was swiftly raised over his head. He saw objects and took cognizance of them. On the floor in the low doorway of a mud hut sat three little naked children covered with flies and dirt. He was the guest of Fatou Anni. These were three of her hundred great-great-grandchildren. The babies were playing with a little dog. Sabron knew the dog but could not articulate his name. By his side sat the woman to whom he owed his life. Her veil fell over her face. She was braiding straw. He looked at her intelligently. She brought him a drink of cool water in an earthen vessel, with the drops oozing from its porous sides. The hut reeked with odors which met his nostrils at every breath he drew. He asked in Arabic:

"Where am I?"

"In the hut of victory," said Fatou Anni.

Pitchoune overheard the voice and came to Sabron's side. His master murmured:

"Where are we, my friend?"

The dog leaped on his bed and licked his face. Fatou Anni, with a whisk of straw, swept the flies from him. A great weakness spread its wings above him and he fell asleep.

Days are all alike to those who lie in mortal sickness. The hours are intensely colorless and they slip and slip and slip into painful wakefulness, into fever, into drowsiness finally, and then into weakness.

The Capitaine de Sabron, although he had no family to speak of, did possess, unknown to the Marquise d'Escligne, an old aunt in the provinces, and a handful of heartless cousins who were indifferent to him. Nevertheless he clung to life and in the hut of Fatou Anni fought for existence. Every time that he was conscious he struggled anew to hold to the thread of life. Whenever he grasped the thread he vanquished, and whenever he lost it, he went down, down.

Fatou Anni cherished him. He was a soldier who had fallen in the battle against her sons and grandsons. He was a man and a strong one, and she despised women. He was her prey and he was her reward and she cared for him; as she did so, she became maternal.

His eyes which, when he was conscious, thanked her; his thin hands that moved on the rough blue robe thrown over him, the devotion of the dog—found a responsive chord in the great-grandmother's heart. Once he smiled at one of the naked, big-bellied great-great-grandchildren Beni Hassan, three years old, came up to Sabron with his fingers in his mouth and chattered like a bird. This proved to Fatou Anni that Sabron had not the Evil Eye. No one but the children were admitted to the hut, but the sun and the flies and the cries of the village came in without permission, and now and then, when the winds arose, he could hear the stirring of the palm trees.

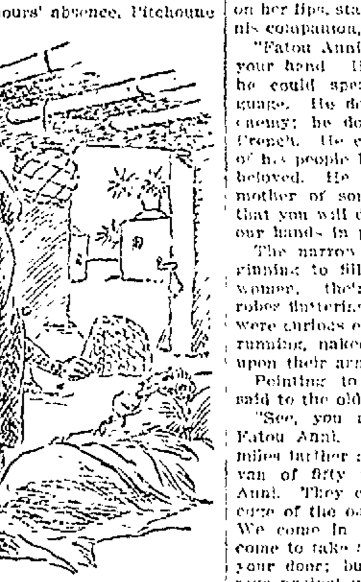

Sabron was reduced to skin and bone. His nourishment was insufficient, and the absence of all decent care was slowly taking him to death. It will never be known why he did not die.

Pitchoune took to making long excursions. He would be absent for days, and in his clouded mind Sabron thought the dog was reconnoitering for him over the vast pink sea without there—which, if one could sail across as in a ship, one would sail to France, through the walls of mellow old Tarascon, to the chateau of good King Rene; one would sail as the moon sails, and through an open window one might hear the sound of a woman's voice singing. The song, ever illusive and irritating in its persistency, tantalized his sick ears.

Sabron did not know that he would have found the chateau shut had he sailed there in the moon. It was as well that he did not know, for his wandering thought would not have known where to follow, and there was repose in thinking of the Chateau d'Escligne.

It grew terribly hot. Fatou Anni, by his side, fanned him with a fan she had woven. The great-great-grandchildren on the floor in the mud fought together. They quarreled over bits of colored glass. Sabron's breath came panting. Without, he heard the cries of the warriors, the lance-bearers—he heard the cries of Fatou Anni's sons who were going out to battle. The French soldiers were in a distant part of the Sahara and Fatou Anni's grandchildren were going out to pillage and destroy. The old woman by his side cried out and beat her breast. Now and then she looked at him curiously, as if she saw death on his pale face. Now that all her sons and grandsons had gone, he was the only man left in the village, as even boys of sixteen had joined the raid. She wiped his forehead and gave him a potion that had been pierced with arrows. It was all she could do for a captive.

Toward sundown, for the first time Sabron felt a little better, and after twenty-four hours' absence, Pitchoune whined at the hut door, but would not come in. Fatou Anni called on Allah, left her patient and went out to see what was the matter with the dog. At the door, in the shade of a palm, stood two Bedouins.

It was rare for the caravan to pass by Beni Medinet. The old woman's superstition foresaw danger in this visit. Her veil before her face, her gnarled old fingers held the fan with which she had been fanning Sabron. She went out to the strangers. Down by the well a group of girls in garments of blue and yellow, with earthen bottles on their heads, stood staring at Beni Medinet's unusual visitors.

"Peace be with you, Fatou Anni," said the older of the Bedouins.

"Are you a cousin or a brother that you know my name?" asked the ancient woman.

"Everyone knows the name of the oldest woman in the Sahara," said Hammet Abou, "and the victorious are always brothers."

"What do you want with me?" she asked, thinking of the helplessness of the village.

Hammet Abou pointed to the hut.

"You have a white captive in there; Is he alive?"

"What is that to you, son of a dog?"

"The mother of many sons is wise," said Hammet Abou portentously, "but she does not know that this man carries the Evil Eye. His dog carries the Evil Eye for his enemies. Your people have gone to battle. Unless this man is cast out from your village, your young men, your grandsons and your sons will be destroyed."

The old woman regarded him calmly.

"I do not fear it," she said tranquilly. "We have had corn and oil in plenty. He is sacred."

For the first time she looked at his companion, tall and slender and evidently younger.

"You favor the coward Franks," she said in a high voice. "You have come to fall upon us in our desolation."

She was about to raise the peculiar wail which would have summoned to her all the women of the village. The dogs of the place had already begun to show their noses, and the villagers were drawing near the people under the palms. Now the young man began to speak swiftly in a language that she did not understand, addressing his comrade. The language was so curious that the woman, with the cry arrested on her lips, stared at him. Pointing to his companion, Hammet Abou said:

"Fatou Anni, this great lord kisses your hand. He says that he wishes he could speak your beautiful language. He does not come from the enemy; he does not come from the French. He comes from two women of his people by whom the captive is beloved. He says that you are the mother of sons and grandsons, and that you will deliver this man up into our hands in peace."

The narrow fetid streets were beginning to fill with the figures of women, their beautifully colored robes fluttering in the light, and there were curious eager children who came running, naked save for the bangles upon their arms and ankles.

Pointing to them, Hammet Abou said to the old sage:

"See, you are only women here, Fatou Anni. Your men are twenty miles farther south. We have a caravan of fifty men all armed, Fatou Anni. They camp just there, at the edge of the oasis. They are waiting. We come in peace, old woman; we come to take away the Evil Eye from your door; but if you anger us and rave against us, the dogs and women of your town will fall upon you and destroy every breast among you."

She began to beat her palms together, murmuring:

"Allah! Allah!"

"Hush," said the Bedouin fiercely, "take us to the captive, Fatou Anni."

Fatou Anni did not stir. She pulled aside the veil from her withered face, so that her great eyes looked out at the two men. She saw her predicament, but she was a subtle Oriental. Victory had been in her camp and in her village; her sons and grandsons had never been vanquished. Perhaps the dying man in the hut would bring the Evil Eye! He was dying, anyway—he would not live twenty-four hours. She knew this, for her ninety years of life had seen many eyes close on the oasis under the hard blue skies.

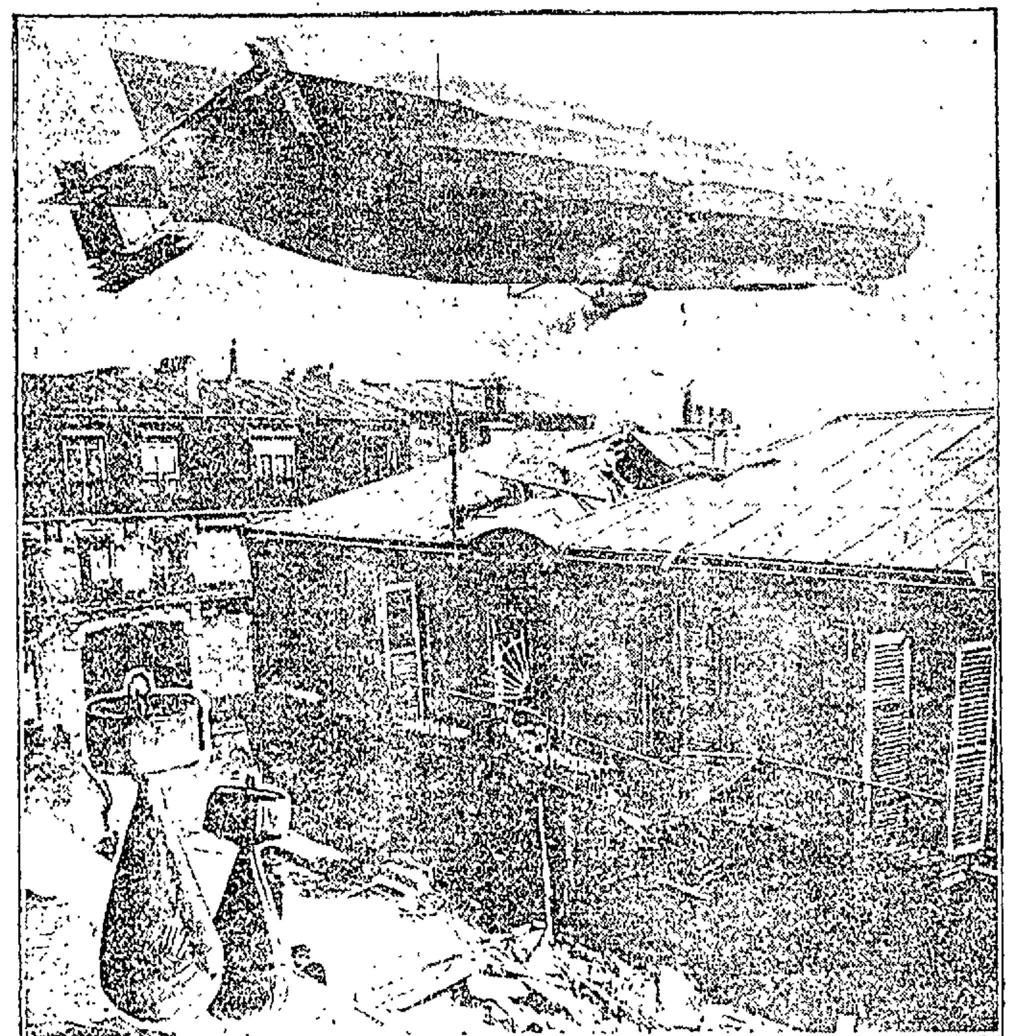

To the taller of the two Bedouins she said in Arabic:

"Fatou Anni is nearly one hundred years old. She has borne twenty children, she has had fifty grandchildren; she has seen many wives, many brides and many mothers. She does not believe the sick man has the Evil Eye. She is not afraid of your fifty armed men. Fatou Anni is not afraid. Allah is great. She will not give up the Frenchman because of fear, nor will she give him up to any man. She gives him to the women of his people."

With dignity and majesty and with great beauty of carriage, the old woman turned and walked toward her hut and the Bedouins followed her.

Cookery Points

Dainty School Sandwiches.

Following are a few delicious sandwiches that will doubtless prove a welcome addition to the school lunch box of any boy or girl:

Olive Sandwiches.—Slightly butter thin slices of whole wheat bread; moisten chopped olives with mayonnaise dressing and spread upon the buttered slices; spread other slices with cream cheese and press together in pairs.

Peanut Sandwiches.—Chop freshly roasted peanuts; pound them in a mortar until smooth and season with salt. Serve on lettuce leaf between buttered white bread.

Fruit Sandwiches.—Cut bread, white, brown and graham, as thin as possible. Use four or five pieces in each sandwich, putting them together so that the colors will contrast. Apple butter, peanut butter, honey or jam, spread thin, may be used as filling.

Fig Sandwiches.—Chop one fourth of a pound of figs fine, add one fourth of a cup of water, cook to a smooth paste. Add a few almonds, chopped fine. When cold spread the mixture upon whole wheat bread. Raisins, dates or marmalade may be used in place of the figs. The marmalade, of course, requires no cooking.

Fancy Cheese Sandwich.—Spread fresh bread with butter, over this spread a layer of Brie or other cream cheese, and over the cheese spread a layer of honey. Press two similarly shaped pieces together and serve at once.

Facts About Soup.

Soups cannot be made in a hurry.

All remnants of meat, bones, bacon rind, and left over bits of meat of every description may be used to make stock, which is the foundation of all soups.

Stock must be frequently skimmed during the early stage of the proceedings.

Never allow stock or soup to cool in the saucepan. The liquid should be poured off and strained into an earthenware bowl.

The bones should be boiled for two or three hours and all the scum removed before the vegetables are added, which should be simmered until tender.

Do not overboil soup, as this spoils the flavor.

Casserole Cookery.

A casserole is a deep, earthenware pan with a lid to it.

After buying it fill it with cold water and a little soda, put it in the oven and let it remain there till the water is nearly boiling. This will cleanse it thoroughly and make it last much longer.

If you use a gas oven put the casserole in while it is still quite cool. If you suddenly put it into a very fierce oven the casserole may crack.

Be careful where you place the casserole when taking it out of the oven. If it is stood in the cold sink or any other cold place it may crack.

If you remember these few hints your casserole will last you many years and you will find it exceedingly useful.

Baking Hints.

Do not cover rising bread in bowls and tins with a dry cloth. Instead cover with a damp cloth which has been wrung out in warm water. In cold weather the damp cloth should be placed over a dry cloth.

As a result the dough will not dry on the top, and the loaves when baked will be much more uniform. To prevent holes appearing in brown bread prick twice with a needle, once when loaves are placed in tins and once immediately before the loaves are placed in the oven.

For Bread Makers.

Bread must always be made in a warm place, and all the ingredients must be warmed before they are combined. This is particularly important when you are making yeast bread.

Yeast is a little plant which begins to grow when it finds itself in a warm, damp place, and as it grows it puffs up the flour and makes the bread light. If you let it get cold you will stop its growth.

Eggs En Cocottes.

Butter fireproof cups and put two tablespoonfuls of cream into each; then on this carefully break a newly laid egg. Sprinkle a little salt, pepper and chopped parsley on the top. Place the cups in a pan of water which comes halfway up the cups and put a piece of buttered paper over the top. Allow them to steam till the eggs are just set; then serve immediately in the cups.

Potatoes For Rheumatism.

A noted Danish food expert claims that an exclusive diet of potatoes is excellent for eliminating the uric acid responsible for the pangs of rheumatism, but he says that to be curative the potatoes must be well chewed and also well buttered to supply the fat needed by the patient.

When Cakes Stick.

When cakes stick to the pan stand for a few moments on a damp tea towel or dishcloth, and the cakes will then turn out easily without breaking.

THE ART OF SHOPPING

There is more in shopping than entering a department and buying certain articles. There is an art of successfully carrying out this necessary and delightful business that can easily be learned.

The shopper should remember that time is money and that salespeople are like herself, human, and equally deserving of courtesy and consideration.

There are one or two "Do's" that every shopper should lay to heart.

Do remember to have clearly in mind what it is that you require. Bring patterns if matching is to be done.

Do not forget that the saleswoman has to attend to many customers and cannot give an undue share of her time to any one. So do not indulge in long and unnecessary conversation.

Do remember that standing behind a counter all day is fatiguing and make allowances for human nature.

Funeral Souvenirs.

Weird funeral souvenirs of Dutch origin were called "doed-koecks," or "dead cakes." With a small bottle of wine and a pair of gloves two of these were sent by way of invitation to relatives and friends whom one wanted to attend the funeral. The original recipe for these cakes, which is said to be authentic, called for fourteen pounds of flour, six pounds of sugar, five pounds of butter, one quart of water, two teaspoonfuls of pearl ash, two teaspoonfuls of salt and one ounce of caraway seed. These were baked in four inch squares, then frosted and marked with the initials of the "departed friend." Sometimes they were eaten at the funeral dinner, but usually they were taken away, like wedding cakes, as souvenirs. Many bakers made a specialty of "funeral cookery," one baker in Philadelphia advertising the specialty as recently as 1748.—New York Tribune.

Real Joy of Farm Owning.

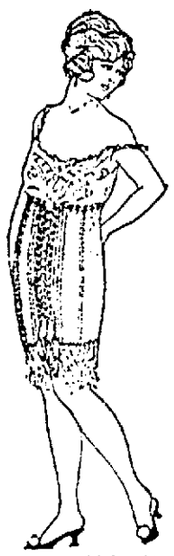

I am not a gentleman farmer, with a great estate over which I ride once in awhile and leave all the real work to my underlings. I cannot think there would be great fun in this. No; I like to take hold with my Portuguese man and plant and spray and trim and prune. To be sure, he does more than his share of the rough work, and much of the year I must be cultivating other kinds of fields than those that grow cabbages and turnips, but the fun of farming comes from being a real farmer while you are one, getting close to the soil, becoming intimate with every living thing, whether it be a plant or animal; loving your tomato vines and raspberry bushes, taking a real pride in your eggplants and your brussels sprouts, whether you get a prize for them at the county fair or not.—Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark in Countryside Magazine and Suburban Life.

We want you to help us celebrate and to enjoy the savings made possible by our greatly reduced prices.

When the Board of Directors of the First National Bank planned their new building, they conceived the idea of a big department store for Connellsville, and built accordingly.

For three years after completion, this fine store room stood empty, showing that merchants in general did not agree with the idea that this city could support another and larger store.

Finally the Wright-Metzler Company embraced the opportunity and opened with a stock equal, at that time, to that of any store in the city.

At first, many doubted the success of the enterprise. But these failed to reckon with the contiguous territory embracing, under normal conditions, a population of 60,000—and made easily accessible by excellent trolley service. The store grew steadily, until today stocks are easily four times as large as at the beginning.

That our efforts to serve you have not been in vain, we feel assured, for, today, we are conscious of a board of trust and confidence between this store and the buying public.

Eleven years of fair dealing, eleven years during which we have furnished only good, reliable merchandise and at one fair price to all.

Your co-operation and support is appreciated and we hope that future relations may be as pleasant as have those of the past.

And so, to celebrate this birthday event, we have arranged this gigantic sale. Every department is fairly ripe with seasonable goods—not the sale kind, but our regular stocks—and at prices greatly reduced. As befitting Eleventh Anniversary, and wherever at all possible, we have made prices to end in Eleven or multiples of that number.

This will be a week of great selling—each day fraught with great opportunities for men, women and children.
